Foreword of the Director

Martin Schlag, Director

Dear Friends,

makers and leaders

we cannot predict the future, but we can shape it. We, the Markets, Culture and Ethics Research Centre of the Pontifical University of the Holy Cross in Rome want to help shape the future of our world, making it a little better, more livable and, yes, more Catholic. To do so, we want to promote social responsibility in the economy. We contribute by systematically and scientifically studying the ethical dimensions of economic and social life in the light of reason and our Christian faith in order to train future decision-

The main objective of our Centre is to promote a dialogue between our Christ-centered faith and contemporary culture in order to support a positive transformation of society and global development. MCE cooperates closely with:

- University of Notre Dame,
- Catholic University of America,
- University of St. Thomas Minnesota and
- Lumen Christi Institute.

The vehicle to achieve these goals is a system of fundamental areas around Christian Humanism developed by MCE with the specific purpose of strengthening those individuals who work at the intersections of markets, culture and ethics based on the following pillars:

- Renewing the tradition of Catholic social thought
- Empowering the poor through markets
- Training future professors
- Program of Church management

Our achievements and activities will culminate in the International Conference in Jerusalem "Ten Years After "Laudato Si": What is Our Relation with and Commitment to Nature?" on July 3 – 6, 2025.

These are the ambitious goals of the MCE Research Centre, which aims to become a prosperous home-port for scholars, academics and future decision-makers, who will expand, advance and broaden the tradition of Catholic free-market humanism throughout the world. In order to do so, we do need your generous support.

If you and/or your company identifies with the values of humanism and Catholic social teaching and wants to tackle current and future socio-economic and socio-political challenges as well as promoting best practice projects, we offer you a range of sponsorship options: bronze, silver, gold, or platinum packages or even a strategic partnership.

Sincerely Yours in Gratitude

Jeartin Sulag
